

New federal government documents on disability policy

Two recent documents have been published by the federal government that we thought our readership might be interested in.

1. In 2013, Human Resources and Skills Development Canada produced the *Federal Disability Reference Guide*. The Guide is designed to ensure that legislation, policies, programs and services delivered by governments in Canada are inclusive, respectful and effective with regard to people with disabilities.
2. This summer (2016), Employment and Social Development Canada published *What does an accessible Canada mean to you?* This discussion guide is the basis for extensive consultations taking place over the coming months to seek input from Canadians of federal disability legislation. To participate in these consultations, go to <http://www.esdc.gc.ca/en/consultations/disability/legislation/index.page>